

HARBEN PUMPS

Consider these Q & A's before investing in a quality hydro-jetter:

Why risk pump breakdowns?

- Avoid unexpected downtime and repair expense typical of conventional pumps.
- Why buy Harben? There are no metal parts exposed to high pressure water. This means less wear; no corrosion; easier, less costly repairs. Look inside a Harben pump—all hard parts are bathed in oil

Want a little peace of mind when you buy a Harben jetter?

- Harben "P" pumps are backed by 5-year warranties
- Run Harben pumps thousands of hours without overhauls

What if you can't use fresh water?

- Harben pumps will not corrode with chlorine and other chemicals found in reclaimed water
- Pump hundreds of fluids including reclaimed water—even salt water—with Harben pumps.

Want to pulsate at high pressure without damaging the pump head?

- Only Harben lets you do it.
- Pulsate continuously at 2,500 psi without risk of damage

Can a Harben pump be damaged if it runs out of water?

- No. Harben pumps are designed to run dry indefinitely without overheating.
- Conventional pumps need cool water to lubricate packing and seals. Harben's advanced rotary piston diaphragm design avoids this weakness.

If Harben pumps look tough—they are.

- Tough, yes. But, not complicated. Harben pumps are surprisingly easy to maintain and repair. In most cases, all that's needed are simple hand tools to replace pressure hoses or damaged diaphragms and check valves.
- And, there's a Harben service center close by to lend a hand or supply you with parts and technical support.
